Visit Booth #2062 at the 61st National Stationery Show

Kennesaw, Ga (March 1, 2007) – They say the second times a charm! The Paper Knot will be participating for the second year at the National Stationery Show held in New York City at the Jacob K. Javits Convention Center May 20-23, 2007. Representatives will be located in Booth #2062.

At the 2006 National Stationery Show The Paper Knot debuted its first line of social stationery and custom wedding invitation albums to warm praise. The organization carries a line of wedding invitations that combine the classic with a modern flair with sets printed in letterpress, thermography, and soon engraving. This spring, The Paper Knot will venture into its second year attending the 2007 National Stationery Show. The company will launch new social products as well as several additions to its custom wedding album.

Also, The Paper Knot has created a set of social stationery consisting of imprintable invitations, notecards, and notepads featured specifically for the ethnic market. “The goal was to create a look that represented the minority of today reflecting their lifestyles and activities,” said Ms. Tawania (Ty) Thigpen, the owner of The Paper Knot. “I knew there was a need for stationery that focused on a more sophisticated, contemporary adult audience, specifically to meet the needs of the multi-cultural audience with the primary market geared towards the African-American community.”

The majority of The Paper Knot's products are reflective of those special events in ones life – birth of a new baby, exchange of those bonding vows of marriage, and other joyous occasions with friends and family – that make for capturing the essence of who you are on paper.

Classic Design meets Modern Style – that's our motto at The Paper Knot. In 2005 after working in marketing and print production for more than six years, Ms. Thigpen decided to stretch her creative wings and The Paper Knot was born.
